

Towers Community,

Another week of work on the books and lots of action both inside and outside our buildings. This was the first week that larger scale demolition happened and we are pleased to say, based on the resident feedback, the job is quieter than expected. The temporary walls must be doing their jobs! As we look at some more specific pieces, here are some new pictures and updates.

Exterior Dining and Entrance Site Work

This week's mission was to finish the installation of the helical piles into the ground so that we could get ready to pour some concrete footings for our new entrance and outside dining space.

It's been a real pleasure to see some of our residents sitting on the sofas in the Tower One lobby watching the action take place.

Montagno is back on pace to have concrete delivered next week. On that delivery date, we'll have an extra Front Desk Officer helping with traffic.

Dining Space/Display Kitchen

Inside, the demolition has continued as well; this week the teams started to take down cinderblock walls in the kitchens. Check out these before and after pictures on the next page.

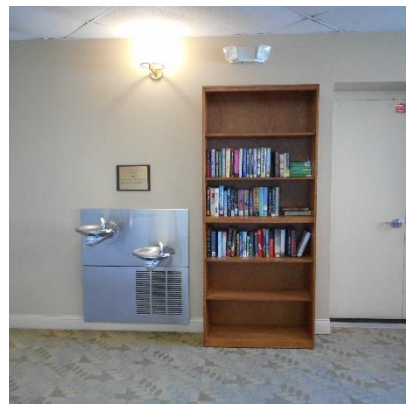

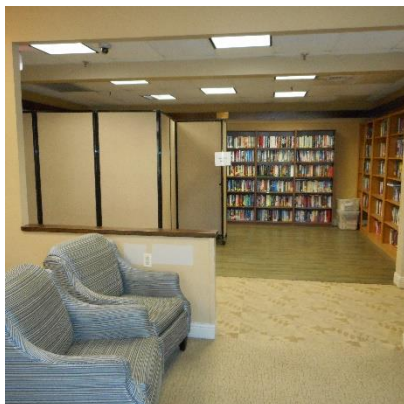

This space will eventually be the back wall of the display kitchen and house the gas fired pizza oven that will be a focal point of our culinary efforts.

Many thanks are due to our Dining Team. They've been jostled around, had parts of their kitchens moved with very little notice, and they've handled it with poise and grace. We are truly thankful for their zest and flexibility!

Tower East Library & New “Hot Reads” Shelf

It was important to our team that the library remain accessible for as long as possible during the renovation. The library is scaled down a bit, but still fully accessible and there is now a “Hot Reads” bookshelf by the Towers Salon. This is a shelf for those newer books and fast reads, so please take a look and borrow something that looks good!

Upcoming Work

Looking at the upcoming work schedules, there are a few thoughts we'd like to share.

1. The day the concrete is poured will create a small disturbance in the morning as the mixers need to get into place quickly to pour the footings, but we'll have staff helping this run smoothly.
2. The demolition of the carport in Tower One might be moved up to late next week so we'll anticipate a little more noise during these days.

Overall, this has been relatively smooth and I'm very proud of how engaged everyone has been with this; we are very grateful for your support. .
